Baby from Kerala treated for cancer at LVPEI

Power of social media and unity of effort of Kerala and Telangana governments came to her rescue

India Today

In a first, a mix of social media and government intervention helped save the life of a baby from Kerala suffering from a rare form of cancer.

Srinivasan, a baby girl from Kollam, Kerala, was diagnosed with a rare and aggressive form of cancer. Her parents, Uma and Vineeth, were in a state of shock and despair. They had exhausted all medical options in India and were left with no hope.

That's when they turned to social media for help. They created a page for Srinivasan's treatment and appealed for assistance. The page quickly gained traction and reached out to people from all over the world.

The Kerala government also took notice of the case and offered to help. They contacted the prestigious LVPEI (L V Prasad Eye Institute) in Hyderabad, which specializes in rare and complex cases.

A team of experts at LVPEI worked tirelessly to save Srinivasan's life. They used advanced technology and innovative treatments to battle the cancer.

After several months of treatment, Srinivasan made a full recovery. Her parents were overjoyed and grateful for the support they received.

The case of Srinivasan highlights the power of social media and the importance of unity in the face of adversity. It is a reminder that with the right support, even the most daunting challenges can be overcome.